WESTERN DISTRICT OF LOUISIANA
SHREVEPORT DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

CRIMINAL ACTION NO. 19-00394-03

VERSUS

JUDGE S. MAURICE HICKS, JR.

AARON MCKINNEY

MAGISTRATE JUDGE HORNSBY

MEMORANDUM RULING

Before the Court is Petitioner Aaron McKinney's ("McKinney") Motion for Compassionate Release. See Record Document 332. The Government has opposed McKinney's motion. See Record Document 337. For the reasons set forth below, McKinney's Motion for Compassionate Release is hereby DENIED.

BACKGROUND

On February 26, 2020, McKinney was charged in a Superseding Indictment with one count of conspiracy to distribute and possess with the intent to distribute methamphetamine, in violation of 21 U.S.C. §§ 841(a)(1), (b)(1)(A), and 846, and one count of possession with intent to distribute methamphetamine, in violation of 21 U.S.C. §§ 841(a)(1), (b)(1)(C). See Record Document 25. He entered a plea of guilty to conspiracy to distribute and possess with the intent to distribute methamphetamine, in violation of Sections 841(a)(1), (b)(1)(A), and 846. See Record Document 279. McKinney was sentenced to 120 months imprisonment, the statutory mandatory minimum. See Record Documents 278 & 279.

McKinney is currently incarcerated at the Springfield Medical Center. To date, McKinney has served roughly one year and nine months of his sentence.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

McKinney seeks compassionate release due to his existing medical conditions. McKinney has been diagnosed with “end-stage” kidney disease and Type 1 diabetes. He has been placed on dialysis. He also lists a variety of medical issues such as high blood pressure, high cholesterol, hyperthyroidism, external neuropathy, and the loss of multiple toes. See Record Document 332. He believes he will essentially be subjected to a death penalty sentence should he remain incarcerated due to his risk of Covid-19 exposure and requests the Court grant him release.<sup>1</sup>

A judgment of conviction, including a sentence of imprisonment, “constitutes a final judgment and may not be modified by a district court except in limited circumstances.” Dillon v. United States, 560 U.S. 817, 824, 130 S.Ct. 2683, 2690 (2010). Title 18, United States Code, Section 3582(c) provides that the Court “may not modify a term of imprisonment once it has been imposed,” except in three circumstances:

- (1) upon a motion by the Bureau of Prisons or the defendant for reduction of sentence under 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A);
- (2) “to the extent otherwise expressly permitted by statute or by Rule 35 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure,” 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(B); or
- (3) where the defendant was sentenced based on a retroactively lowered sentencing range, 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(2).

In this case, McKinney moves to modify his sentence pursuant 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A). Under this section, the Court may reduce a sentence “if it finds that extraordinary and compelling reasons warrant such a reduction” and “that such a reduction is consistent with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission.” 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A).

<sup>1</sup> McKinney also claims violation of his Eighth Amendment right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment by the Bureau of Prisons. However, as noted by the Government, a motion for compassionate release is not the proper outlet for bringing such a claim. McKinney next requests home confinement in lieu of imprisonment, however, the Court does not have jurisdiction to issue such an order. This authority rests with the Bureau of Prisons. Because the Court lacks jurisdiction to decide either issue, they will not be addressed here.

Prior to 2018, only the Director of the BOP could file Section 3582(c)(1)(A) motions, also known as compassionate release motions. In 2018, Congress passed, and President Trump signed the First Step Act, which among other actions, amended the compassionate release process. Under the First Step Act, Section 3582(c)(1)(A) now allows prisoners to directly petition courts for compassionate release. However, before filing compassionate release motions, prisoners must exhaust their administrative remedies in one of two ways:

- (1) prisoners may file a motion with the court after fully exhausting all administrative rights to appeal the BOP’s decision not to file a motion for compassionate release, or
- (2) prisoners may file a motion with the court after requesting release and there has been “the lapse of 30 days from the receipt of such request by the warden of the defendant’s facility, whichever is earlier.”

18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A). McKinney has exhausted his administrative remedies by filing an administrative request for relief and waiting 30 days without receiving a determination.

Subject to considerations of 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a), Section 3582(c)(1)(A) permits a reduction in McKinney’s term of imprisonment if the Court determines that extraordinary and compelling reasons warrant a reduction. The reduction must be “consistent with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission.” 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A). Previously, a district court was confined to the policy statements set forth in U.S.S.G. § 1B1.13 to determine whether a compelling reason existed to grant release. However, the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit recently vacated this restricted examination finding that the policy statements contained under U.S.S.G. § 1B1.13 are only binding on the Court when the motion for compassionate release is brought on the prisoner's behalf by the BOP. See U.S. v. Shkambj, No. 20-40543, 2021 WL 1291609, at *3 (5th Cir. 04/07/2021).

The Fifth Circuit instructed that a district court considering a motion for compassionate release brought by the prisoner himself "is bound only by § 3582(c)(1)(A)(i) and, as always, the sentencing factors in § 3553(a)." Id. at *4. Shkambj did not, however, render § 1B1.13 irrelevant with respect to defendant-filed motions under Section 3582(c)(1)(A), as the Fifth Circuit has long recognized that although not dispositive, the commentary to § 1B1.13 informs the district court's analysis as to what reasons may be sufficiently extraordinary and compelling to necessitate compassionate release. See U.S. v. Robinson, No. 3:18-CR-00228-01, 2021 WL 1723542 (W.D. La. 04/30/2021), citing U.S. v. Thompson, 984 F.3d 431, 433 (5th Cir. 2021). While not binding, § 1B1.13 suggests that the following are deemed extraordinary and compelling reasons warranting a sentence reduction: (1) the defendant's medical conditions; (2) the defendant's age; (3) family circumstances; or (4) other reasons. See U.S.S.G. § 1B1.13, cmt. n.1; see also Thompson, 984 F.3d at 433.

"In general, the defendant has the burden to show circumstances meeting the test for compassionate release." U.S. v. Stowe, No. H-11-803(1), 2019 WL 4673725 at *2 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 25, 2019); see also U.S. v. Ennis, No. EP-02-CR-1430-PRM-1, 2020 WL 2513109, at *4 (W.D. Tex. May 14, 2020) ("[T]he defendant has the burden to show circumstances meeting the test for compassionate release."); U.S. v. Wright, No. 16-214-04, 2020 WL 1976828, at *6 (W.D. La. Apr. 24, 2020) (Petitioner has the "burden of showing the necessary circumstances, or a combination of circumstances, that would warrant relief under the compassionate release statute.”). In certain instances, the COVID-19 outbreak may affect whether an inmate can show extraordinary and compelling reasons warranting compassionate release under Section 3582(c)(1)(A)(i). If an inmate has a chronic medical condition that has been identified by the Centers for Disease Control (“CDC”) as elevating the inmate’s risk of becoming seriously ill from COVID-19, that condition, in light of the pandemic, may rise to the level of “extraordinary and compelling reasons” under Section 3582(c)(1)(a). In other words, some conditions that would not have previously constituted an “extraordinary and compelling reason” now fall into this category because of the risk of COVID-19.

McKinney believes his diabetes, kidney disease, and other ailments equate to extraordinary and compelling reasons for his release. However, McKinney has admitted to being fully vaccinated against COVID-19. See Record Documents 332 at 5. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the COVID-19 vaccines available in the United States are highly effective at preventing COVID-19 and may also reduce the risk of serious illness in the case of a COVID-19 infection. See Benefits of Getting a COVID-19 Vaccine, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, medical conditions, <https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/vaccines/vaccine-benefits.html> (last visited September 23, 2021). Thus, even with his medical conditions, there is no extraordinary and compelling reason supporting compassionate release in light of his vaccination status. See generally U.S. v. Robinson, No. 3:18-CR-00228-01, 2021 WL 1723542 (W.D. La. 04/30/2021); U.S. v. Jones, No. 14-154, 2021 WL 1172537 (E.D. La. 03/29/2021); U.S. v. White, No. 11-287, 2021 WL 3021933 (W.D. La. 07/16/2021).

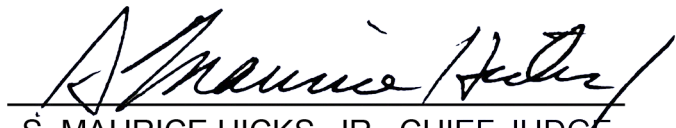

Notwithstanding, even if this Court were to find that McKinney had extraordinary and compelling reasons for compassionate release, granting such release in this case would not comport with the factors enumerated in Section 3553(a). See 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A). McKinney's criminal history is extensive and includes several drug convictions, firearm convictions and simple battery. See Record Document 175. He has repeatedly failed to comply with the terms of probation and parole and clearly lacks respect for the law. Furthermore, McKinney has yet to complete two years of his mandatory 10-year sentence. The Court agrees with the Government that a reduction of sentence would not equate to a "just punishment" under Section 3553(a)(2)(A). See Record Document 337. It is this Court's belief that a reduced sentence in this case simply would not reflect the seriousness of the offense, would not promote respect for the law, would not afford adequate deterrence to criminal conduct, and would not protect the public from further crimes of this Defendant.

CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing reasons, McKinney's Motion for Compassionate Release (Record Document 332) be and is hereby DENIED.

An order consistent with the terms of the instant Memorandum Ruling shall issue herewith.
